Student Affairs Committee takes action against plagiarism at WSU

By KELLI MORGAN
Special Writer

Plagiarism and dishonest conduct during an exam are a couple of reasons why the Student Affairs Committee at Wright State University has taken action to help students realize how serious these and other problems are. This action has resulted in the publishing of a new academic misconduct brochure, which includes the school's revised policies. According to Joanne Risacher, director of Student Development, these brochures will be available to students by mid-February.

"The main reason for the brochure is to better inform Wright State students about the policies of academic misconduct, and to let them know what is considered misconduct," said Risacher. The Student Affairs committee also wanted to clear up the process of consequences which accompanies the violation of policies. "The brochure covers broad-based information of which students should make themselves aware.

"Although there has not been a real increase of academic misconduct, the problem has always been around," said Risacher. "Through the publishing of this brochure, we hope that the number of misconduct incidents will begin to decrease over the next year."

Information in the upcoming brochure can also be found in the student handbook. SAC decided that this information should be available in a more convenient and separate piece of literature, since academic misconduct is such an important issue, and since some details have been revised.

The academic misconduct policy was recently reviewed by the SAC and the Academic Council. Along with them, the Student Government revised some pieces of information and put together the brochure.

So remember in the middle of February, to look for and pick up, one of these brochures at either the Information Booth or the Student Development office, which are located in the Student Services wing.

High school drop-outs given a second chance

An alternative education for potential high school drop-outs from the Dayton area is now offered through the Wright State University Prep Program (UPP).

A consortium of universities, including Wright State, Central State and the University of Dayton, worked out a proposal with the Dayton Public Schools to set up learning centers on university campuses for teenagers to earn their GED (high school equivalency certificate).

The UPP, implemented at WSU in October 1988 and supervised by Dr. Bill Gordon, Wright State professor and Executive Program Development Officer of the College of Education and Human Services, currently enrolls 22 students working towards their GED.

Gloria Allen, WSU Prep Coordinator, calls these students "At-Risk-Kids" — kids who might not graduate from the traditional school system. According to Allen, the students in the UPP had disciplinary problems in the public schools and did not attend classes regularly. The UPP gives teenagers not only the opportunity to improve their education, but also to build self-confidence.

Thomas Kirch, Cooperating Teacher of the UPP, and Kate Murphy, a Special Education graduate assistant, instruct the students in Math, Science, Social Studies and English. The UPP curriculum also offers a self-improvement program and a student support group. Students, with the help of Doris Peter, a psychology graduate student, learn to interact with each other, to share their feelings and to discuss their problems. Allen states that the goal of the program is for students to attain "a better perception of self and to promote individual commitment and progress."

Because the UPP encourages students to take on responsibilities and become a part of WSU, a few students work as part-time volunteers at the WSU Mini-University and the Boling Center.

Allen said she welcomes WSU's involvement with the UPP. Both Dr. Louis Shupe, Assistant Head of Art Therapy, and Dr. Gary Barlow, Acting Head of Human Services, actively support the program through directly working with the students.

If you are interested in helping or providing materials for the UPP, please contact Allen at 873-3068, 224 Creative Arts.

Reagan hopes for higher education: Unfulfilled

(CPS)—Ronald Reagan left office last week in a flurry of farewell broadcasts and parties, he left behind much of the ambitious college agenda he outlined eight years either unaccomplished or simply abandoned.

That's good news to Charles Saunders of the American Council on Education, which represents college presidents in Washington D.C. "Fortunately, the Reagan administration's legacy is not as serious as they would have liked."

Yet the administration's failure to accomplish many of its campus goals — abolishing the U.S. Department of Education, shifting the responsibility for funding campuses from Washington to the states, ending alleged waste and fraud and getting colleges to adopt courses that incorporate "family values" — is upsetting others.

"They were not successful," said Jeanne Allen of the Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank that helped formulate much of the administration's education agenda. "There is little legacy."

Bennet regularly blasted the nation's higher education leaders as wasteful price gougers who pushed for higher federal funding, raised tuition exorbitantly and offered students poor educations.

Such tactics, said Allen, effectively focused public attention on costs and quality. "Bill Bennet made sure people know what's going on with their taxes," she said.

The Pursuit of Happiness plays Bogart's

By SCOTT URICK
F/E Editor

"And I guess it won't be long/ Till I'm sitting in a room with a bunch of people. ... Who just can't seem to get it up." Such is the basic thrust of Canada's latest musical export. The three man, two woman, Toronto-based band called The Pursuit of Happiness (TPOH) played to a light crowd at Bogart's Monday night.

With the idea that true romance and "happily ever after" is mostly just a fanciful concept, this band has come forth with a style that seems specifically tailored to the college crowds of today. Currently opening for Duran Duran, TPOH took Monday night's break in that schedule to be the headliner in Cincinnati. Using their name ironically, the band, under the guidance of lead guitarist, songwriter, and vocalist, Moe Berg, takes a tongue in cheek look at the pursuit of romantic happiness.

Berg has taken the metal textures that are popular today and mixed them with folk-rock harmonies to come up with a style that is very similar to the solid, unwimpy style of Todd Rundgren (who produced their new album) and Badfinger from the '70's. Berg's lyrics work well with the music, as he sings about things that anyone who has been through their late teens and young adulthood can identify with. Throughout the lyrics, Berg incorporates levity saying, "If I'm going to write about a situation that is disturbing, I'm going to try to make it funny or make it unusual so that more people might get it."

In their pointedly abrasive first single, "I'm An Adult Now," which broke into Billboard's top 100 just last week, the band catalogues the horrors of growing up. In "Looking for Girls," Berg's basic philosophy of love comes forth as, "I don't care if she's skinny/ I don't care if she's fat/ As long as she goes for boys like me/ 'Cause I like them like that."

The nucleus of the group, Berg; drummer, Dave Gilby; and bassist, Johnny Sinclair, have been together since 1986. Guitarist/singer Kris Abbott and singer Leslie Stanwyck joined the group this year and the obvious chemistry within the group results in a professional, yet unconventional sound that is destined to achieve great success in the U.S.

Success is no stranger to TPOH. After being initially exposed to the Canadian public via an independently produced video of "I'm an Adult Now" in '86, their popularity skyrocketed. Then, in '87, the group picked up two CASBY awards (the Canadian equivalent of the People's Choice Awards), for Most Promising Group and Best Video. In addition to three other CASBY nominations, they also received a Toronto Music Award for Best Group and a Juno Award (Canada's Grammy) nomination for Best Video.

Although the band played to a limited crowd, Monday night, they put out enough energy to keep the majority of the crowd packed around the stage and dancing for the entire show. Talking to Berg and Johnny Sinclair after the show, the down-to-earth attitude that had been projected during the show proved not to be an act. Success hasn't seemed to spoil TPOH. As Sinclair said, "There's no real place we want to be. Our main thing is to do well enough that we can keep making albums. We don't want to rewrite the book or anything... just keep making albums."

Anyone who passed up tickets for this show missed a real treat. When TPOH comes around again, they may not still have the raw energy you get with a newly successful band and lose with an established group. With their first album, "Love Junk," on Chrysalis Records already out, TPOH is sure to become an established group.

This review would be incomplete without some mention of the venue. Bogart's once again has proved itself as one of the premier concert halls in the Midwest. Visibility is marvelous from all of the seats, wheelchair accessibility is afforded some of the better seats and reserved restroom, and the staff is definitely more interested in providing excellent service than bouncing patrons.

All in all, a top-notch show by a top-notch band in a top-notch place.

Holy Ghost : A heavenly production

By M.H. WEBSTER
Associate Writer

Religious fanatics have raided the stage of the Festival Theatre. Not just your average faith healing, Bible-thumping evangelists, not your everyday ordinary "fire and brimstone" Bible belters, but all too real honest to God Pentecostal Church of God Snakehandlers. I'm not sure what prompted playwright Romulus Linney to turn out the script of the Holy Ghost, but the actors who have tackled it have created a show to remember.

At pre-show, we are privy to the inside of an old run-down shack. There are benches stacked in one corner, a piano up against the wall and a small improvised stage in another corner. Several people come in and out setting things up, looking for other people; something is about to happen there. The set, designed by Martin Fahrner a senior Design/Tech major here at WSU is perfect for setting up the backwoods flavor of the show. I especially liked the effect of the full moon through the back-drop.

This show is a great piece of ensemble work. The entire cast is onstage from the first twenty minutes of the show, and doesn't get to leave until the lights come down for curtain call. The show was well cast, and the actors perform well together, building an incredible amount of on-stage energy, and filling their characters with life for every second they are onstage, whether in the limelight at that moment or not. Among the more impressive performances were Andrea Bendewald as the young and confused Nancy, handling it with just the right amount of anger and uncertainty, Tom Murphy as the tolerant old lawyer Rogers Canfield, and Paul Newman, who played Coleman with so much driven anger, I was just waiting for him to explode. And in the congregation, the roles of Carl Specter, haunted by his old hunting dog, played by Terek Puckett, Bonnie Bridge, and Mrs. Wall, the congregation gossips, wonderfully portrayed by Barbara Hunt and the amazing Rebecca Finnegan, and, of course, the Reverend Odiah Buckhorn, Sr. performed immaculately by guest artist Warren Hamack. I wish I had the space to mention the accomplishments of the rest of the cast, but I will say that they were the blood and guts of the show and really put it on its feet.

There were a few moments that appeared to be a bit over theatrical as the congregation would gather in prayer just to form a "picture," but the show as a whole leaves something to think about. Director Warren Rhodes uses real snakes in this show, but don't worry about the snakes, the actors have no trouble handling them, and they are never to slither of their own free will.

The remaining performances are Thursday through Saturday at 8:00 PM and Sunday at 3:00 PM. For more information, contact the University Theatre Box Office at 873-2500.

Cash prizes given during Springbreak

ORLANDO, Fla.—Students flocking to Florida for some fun in the sun during Springbreak '89 are invited to compete in the annual Red Lobster 10K Classic in Orlando on Saturday, March 11.

More than $64,500 in prize money is at stake, including cash awards of $7,500 for first place in the men's and women's divisions, plus a total of $55,000 in bonus money.

"This will be our seventh annual classic," said race director Jim Hughes, who added that all proceeds will benefit the Central Florida Chapter of the Spina Bifida Association. "We expect several thousand runners, including college students from throughout the U.S. We'll also have a good field of world-class athletes from a dozen-plus countries."

The registration fee for all runners is $10 before March 9. The race-day registration fee will be $15. All Red Lobster 10K Classic participants will receive a custom-designed T-shirt, a limited edition commemorative pin, a sports towel, $15 worth of Red Lobster restaurant coupons and an admission ticket to the post-race party at Church Street Station in the city's night life district.

In last year's race, Liz Lynch McColgan of Scotland set a new 10K loop course woman's world record and earned more than $1,000 per minute for her victory time of 30 minutes, 59 seconds. Paul Davies-Hale of England won the men's division with a time of 28 minutes, 18 seconds.

Persons seeking more information about the race can call Jim Hughes at 1-800-252-RL10. Entry forms can be obtained by calling Hughes or writing to the Track Shack, 1322 N. Mills Avenue, Orlando, Fla. 32803. Entry forms will also be available to interested persons merely by stopping by The Daily Guardian office and asking for Todd Bunnell.

Wheelchair basketball wins big

By CINDY HORNER

Associate Writer

Over the weekend, the men's wheelchair basketball team played in the tournament at Champaign, Illinois, and came away winning three out of four games.

In their first game on Friday, the Raiders defeated the University of Whitewater-Wisconsin, 48-36. John Gould paced the game with 20 points. Also scoring in double figures for the Raiders were Dmitri Haight with 12 and Keith Cable with 10. Haight led the team with 13 rebounds.

On Saturday, the Raiders won two straight against the same team, the Southwest State Broncos from Minnesota. In the first game, the Raiders won 47-44. Jim Munson led the way for the Raiders in scoring with 17 and Gould scored 14. Haight scored 12, while again leading with rebounds for the Raiders, pulling down seven. For the game, the Raiders had some decent foul shooting, going 9-12 from the line.

In the second game, the Broncos made the game more exciting, but the Raiders posted up a victory 39-37. Munson finished off a great day, tossing in 17 for the Raiders, and 34 for the day. Haight was the second highest scorer with 16, and again led the team in rebounds with five.

At this point, the Raiders were 3 and 0 in the tournament.

However, on Sunday, the Raiders' winning streak was stopped by the University of Illinois, host of the tournament. Illinois downed the Raiders 46-23. Haight led the way in scoring, notching 13 for the Raiders, and he also added seven more rebounds to his total.

Illinois, now 8-0 in the conference, is the number one team in the conference. The Raiders play host to them this coming weekend.

For the tournament Haight was the best all-around player for the Raiders. He finished the tournament with 53 points and 32 rebounds. Gould had an excellent tournament, scoring 46 points and pulling down 14 rebounds, while Munson finished with 38 points and 11 rebounds.

The Raiders are now 12-8 overall, and 6-2 in the conference. They are currently in second place and can move into first, if they take two games from Illinois this weekend.

Wheelchair basketball head coach Dan Byrnes said, "Illinois is tough, but we have a real good chance of beating them. It is different playing at home. The fans help out a lot."

The women's team plays the Fighting Illini at 1 p.m., and the men's team plays at 3 p.m. on Saturday. On Sunday, the women play at 11 p.m., and the men play at 1 p.m.
